Legislators moving to gain control of university system

By Mike Dawson

Kaimin Reporter

HELENA — Legislators said last week that the constricting state budget has forced a move in the Capitol to gain tighter legislative control over the university system.

The move is a response to a frustrating budget situation and a distrust of university officials and the state Board of Regents, lawmakers said in private interviews.

Carrol Krause, commissioner of higher education, said he was particularly worried about the House Appropriations Committee agreement Friday afternoon to draft a bill for a constitutional amendment.

The amendment would take control of higher education money away from the regents and give it to the Legislature.

Committee member Ray Peck, D-Havre, said at the committee meeting Friday that he requested the bill because the state Constitution is vague about which of the three branches of government the university system falls under.

Peck said the amendment would clearly make the regents subordinate to the Legislature and allow the Legislature to control spending within the system.

"Does the Legislature have the constitutional authority that it should have?" Peck asked the committee. "We need to decide what the appropriations authority is at this time."

Peck said the amendment would give the Legislature authority over the university system to the same degree it has over other state agencies.

Rep. Dorothy Bradley, D-Bozeman, said that isn't necessary because the other agencies don't have a board governing them.

However, Peck said that board is all the more reason. The new amendment would prevent the regents from transferring money from one school to another during a budget crunch.

Protesting Peck's bill, Krause told the committee that the regents have never made such a transfer of money.

Krause said in an interview Saturday that the Regents have "always operated under legislative intent."

Executive recommendations ax yearbook, WRC budget requests

By Dave Kirkpatrick

Kaimin Reporter

The ASUM Executive Committee recommended Tuesday that the Yearbook Committee and the Women's Resource Center lose their funding for the 1987-88 school year.

The executive budget recommends that Central Board not give the Yearbook Committee the $16,000 it requested and WRC the $9,000 it requested.

ASUM gets its funds from the student activity fee that is based on enrollment, and because enrollment is declining, so are ASUM funds, said ASUM President Paul Tuss.

Tuss, an Executive Committee member, said in an interview Tuesday that he did not feel ASUM could afford to fund a "luxury" group like the yearbook.

"We're really getting down to basics with this budget," he said.

Tuss said he recommended ASUM stop funding WRC because the group is too political and does not serve a large enough portion University of Montana women.

The center has taken strong stands on abortion and other issues, Tuss said, adding that ASUM does not fund political groups.

Kerri Becktold, assistant yearbook editor, said Tuesday that the yearbook never felt it needed the $16,000 it requested.

Becktold said the committee only wanted $12,000, but Dan Henderson, ASUM Business Manager, told the committee it should request more money for staff salaries and its phone budget.

"We knew there were places we could cut," Becktold said, adding "we only want our fair share."

Complete list on page 4

Loretta Arendt, a WRC spokeswoman, said the Executive Committee's decision did not completely surprise her.

ASUM recently tried to cut the center's funding and take away its office space because WRC would not accept a CB-appointed director. However, WRC obtained an injunction from a federal District Court stopping the action by ASUM.

Arendt said if CB does not fund the center, then WRC could probably use that in its court battle with ASUM.

"At this point it looks like it's our ballgame," she added.

She said WRC members would still try to organize a women's group on campus or in Missoula with or without ASUM funding.

Becktold said the Yearbook Committee would also continue operating next year even if it did not receive money from ASUM.

The staff would have to increase advertising sales and increase book sales to continue, she said, adding that she did not know if these increases would be enough for the group to survive.

Becktold said members of the committee would lobby CB Wednesday and Thursday to try to receive some money.

Under the new budget procedure, established this quarter, groups requesting money from ASUM are given three days from the time the executive budget is released to lobby for funding.

Schwinden to visit UM Thursday

By Marlene Mehlhaff

Kaimin Reporter

Gov. Ted Schwinden will be at the University of Montana Thursday to discuss his proposed budget with students and faculty.

Schwinden will answer questions about his proposed cut of $3.5 million from UM in an hour-long discussion session in the Underground Lecture Hall at 2 p.m.

Paul Shively, director of the Student Legislative Action Committee, said Tuesday that the governor might be able to stay for an additional half hour to talk to students and faculty on an individual basis or to continue the question-and-answer period.

Shively said he has been trying to arrange an appearance by the governor since November.

Schwinden agreed to come to UM at this time because he will be in Missoula for other business, Shively added.

Shively said it is "very fortunate" that the governor will be at UM the day before the Montana Associated Students' "March for the Future" in Helena.

Classes slice and dice for a nominal price

Hey buddy, wanna buy a few credits?

editorial

If you don't want to work hard, have a little money and need a few credits to pad your Spring Quarter schedule, the HPE department has a deal for you.

Tack an extra $12.50 onto your tuition and you can play pool in the University Center two hours a week. You'll receive one HPE credit without breaking a sweat.

But that's not all you'll get. You'll also receive hassle-free instruction from your teacher.

As one happy customer can attest, you'll receive about 30 minutes of instruction during the entire quarter of classes. The instructor will show you how to rack the balls, briefly outline the rules to nineball and snooker, then will leave you to learn the game.

But wait, that's not all. Order now and the university will throw in a great attendance requirement. You don't have to go.

Oh, the instructor warns that a student will fail if he misses three classes. But to prove attendance, all one has to do is make a check by his name on the class roster.

This leads to wholesale hooky.

But don't worry, folks. The instructor looks the other way when a student makes his mark and high tails it out of the UC. Nobody cares when you mark four or five of your buddies as present when they are actually at home in bed nursing a hangover.

It's a great class for those who want to learn how to apply chalk to a cue.

After you complete Billiards I, you can continue your education with Billiards II. Same great deal. Money for credits.

But wait, if you need more easy credits, the university will throw in HPE 395, better known as Sports and Cinema.

Back by popular demand, the course that enlightened hundreds will be offered again in the spring.

From 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Mondays next quarter, you can watch a movie in a classroom dominated by big guys in sweat pants. After the night's flick, the instructor will discuss the movie, the characters and tell how they compare to real-life jocks.

You'll be able to attend special screenings of major motion pictures. Last year's class watched such classics as "Rollerball" and "Vision Quest," the story about a high school wrestler hungry for a state championship and a chance to lose his virginity to a beautiful woman.

High quality entertainment will be followed by high quality discussion about the way the movie industry depicts America's athletes.

But wait, along with intellectual stimulation, you'll get your exercise.

Last year's class bolted for the back door the minute the credits rolled, leaving the instructor to lecture to less than half the class.

Not even William "The Refrigerator" Perry could have stopped the mass exodus from the screening room.

But remember folks, the only "real" work the instructor required of last year's class was a five-page paper about, you guessed it, Sports and Cinema.

So friends, take advantage of this great offer now because supplies are limited.

Such beneficial, high quality programs like these shouldn't last long while class sections are being hacked from the business school and death looms over six academic programs at UM.

Order now.

Kevin Twidwell

Where Does It Go?

There's a lot of brown ground showing around campus these days. Has Spring come for good? That means awful news for the skiers. It also brings to mind one of the brain boggling questions philosophers have pondered for millennia.

It's a question that people have wondered at this time of the year since time immemorial. It's a question that has brought down kings, toppled empires and sent lesser men and women than us to the funny farm.

Where does the white go when the snow melts?

Some of the great minds of our campus have pondered long hours into the night. I therefore offer a few of their hypotheses for public review. (For now we will ignore the work of Plato, Erasmus, Rousseau and Marx.)

Cindy proposed a line of reasoning which I cannot quote in its entirety: "The white evaporates and is found in fluffy white clouds, which in turn makes the snow white, which in turn makes the clouds white, which in turn makes the snow white, which in turn..."

One might readily accept this theory as it is consistent with the First Law of Thermodynamics and the fundamental ecological principles of nutrient and mineral cycling. However, there are the more reasonable ideas.

Steve speculated that someone sneaks out at night and stores the white in the basement of Main Hall to make building blocks for the stadium. An anonymous employee of the Food Service postulated that the white got collected as a primary ingredient of the Cream of Celery Soup.

Rich declared with finality that it was magic. When pressed for details he clammed up, proclaiming that the particulars are "none of your -----business." Sounds suspicious to me. The public has a right to know whether someone is using the white of our snow to dabble in black magic.

Delayed Reaction By Randy DeLay

Another individual conjectured that the white is always there. It just goes through a spatial metamorphosis (shape-change) triggered by the vernal equinox (Spring) that renders it undetectable to our ocular apparatus (eyes).

Mitch said he had to give a religious answer because "I'm in Humanities this quarter." The snow comes from God, he explained, as a symbol of purity. But we are not pure so the white gets trampled into scum. God keeps trying; someday we'll catch on.

A similar line of reasoning was tied in with the disappearance of unicorns in recent centuries. Unicorns are a known symbol of purity. According to the hypothesis, the white always went to their construction. But since the Industrial Revolution pollution has soiled the snow, everyone knows unicorns cannot be made from unclean snow. The unicorn is an endangered, probably extinct, species. One more black mark for the human race.

If any other educated guesses to this question of questions exist I would like to hear them. Manuscripts can be sent to the Kaimin in care of our erstwhile editor, who tried to give some scientific mumbo-jumbo about crystalline structures and liquification. (Journalists should stick to what they are good at — making up stories.)

Finally, one person, who begged for anonymity, produced a theory to which we all can relate. "I want to say it disappears," she said, brow furrowed in concentration, "But that doesn't explain anything."

Randy DeLay is a senior recreation management and zoology.

ASUM will defend students with 'wrongful' tickets

By Mike Hagan
Kaimin Reporter

ASUM attorney Bruce Barrett said recently that he will defend University of Montana students who feel they were wrongfully ticketed last fall in the Missoula residential permit-parking district.

In an interview, Barrett said seven students are fighting tickets received last quarter because they feel the signs in the area did not make it clear that they were parked illegally.

Although Barrett's complaints last November about inadequate street signs resulted in additional signs being installed, he still feels some places in the district are not adequately marked.

Becky Lester, a sophomore in education whom Barrett is representing, said the arrows on some of the signs make it seem as if parking on one side of the street is legal when actually both sides are restricted.

Missoula Parking Commissioner Tom Kosena said most people who were ticketed in early October have had their tickets dismissed.

"Anyone who has a valid argument will probably get dismissed," he said. "Going to court seems like a long way to go to get out of paying a $10 ticket."

He also said that complaints about the ordinance have dramatically decreased. "It was awkward for people to adjust to at first," he said, "but the arguments have quieted."

Parking officers met a barrage of complaints when they initially enforced the ordinance last October.

Most people complained that the district wasn't adequately marked, he said.

Kosena said the number of tickets being issued has also decreased significantly.

"We started out writing about 200 tickets a day, but now we only issue about 12 to 18," he said.

Barrett also agreed that bad feelings about the ordinance have mellowed. Chris Henningsen, president of the University Homeowner's Association, said nobody has complained to him in more than two months.

Feelings about the ordinance are still mixed though.

The results of a recent Kaimin, door-to-door survey found that many residents living inside the district seem to be satisfied with the ordinance while those living outside the district feel the parking problem has not been solved.

Henry Viche, 425 Connell Ave., said, "This has been the first time I've been able to park in front of my house in over ten years." Viche said he started the drive to pass the ordinance in 1976 after seeing the success of a similar program in San Francisco.

But some residents in the area feel the ordinance is not a success.

Elizabeth Holcombe, 528 Daly Ave., said the ordinance forces people to park in other areas, such as the parking lot behind her apartment building.

Many people living outside the district feel that the ordinance has just moved the problem into their neighborhoods.

"Everyone should be able to park in front of their house," Joe O'Dell, 327 McLeod Ave., said. "They should extend the ordinance."

Denny Lesmeister, a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity, said members sometimes have to park two blocks away from the house.

Most people surveyed said they feel it is the university's responsibility to provide adequate parking for students.

"The university should provide enough parking for the kids," one resident who wished to remain anonymous said. "If they wanted room to build another football field they would find it."

Alderman Jack Schommer said the City Council has heard no reaction from the university, but the city and the university will meet next month.

"I will ask if the university has done anything about the parking problem, even though I know they haven't," he said.

The council will review the ordinance sometime this spring rather than during the summer, Alderwoman Marilyn "Mike" Cregg said.

The ordinance creating the district requires the council to review the financial success of the district in August.

VITA gives tax help

By Roger L. Kelley
Kaimin Reporter

The April 15 filing deadline for 1986 income tax returns is fast approaching, but University of Montana students don't have to worry about preparing their own taxes or paying a professional service to do the work.

Anyone who earned less than $10,000 last year can have his or her income tax return prepared free by UM accounting students.

About 20 accounting students are preparing returns in this year's Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program, according to Kris Kleven, a junior in accounting.

To be eligible for VITA the taxpayer must be a legal, year-round resident of Montana and must have earned $10,000 or less last year, excluding Social Security and other tax-exempt income and $1,080 worth of personal and dependency exemptions. People who are self-employed or who own rental property do not qualify.

Kleven said anyone who wants help should bring:

- Last year's tax returns.
- W-2 forms.
- Interest and dividend statements.
- Medical receipts.
- Receipts of taxes paid on real estate, property and motor vehicles.
- Charitable contribution receipts.

VITA will operate in room 109 of the UM Business Administration Building Feb. 21 and 28 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Feb. 22 and March 1 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Lack of candidates forces ASUM to extend deadline

By Jill Anderson
Kaimin Reporter

ASUM is extending the application deadline for Central Board positions until Friday because only 13 candidates have applied for seats on the 20-member board.

The original deadline was Feb. 10.

Each candidate must file a petition signed by 75 students to get on the ballot for ASUM elections on March 4 and 5.

"We didn't even have enough to have an election," ASUM secretary Pam Grier said of the petitions that had been filed.

"I don't think this has ever happened before."

If not enough applications come in by Friday, Grier said, an election won't be necessary.

She said the people who have applied would get automatic appointments, depending on the constituencies they represent.

CB comprises 13 off-campus representatives, five on-campus delegates, and one representative each from married-student housing and organized off-campus groups.

Students who request one of those positions with no competition would be automatically appointed, Grier said, and if too many have applied for one constituency, some candidates could represent another group.

If the board is left unfilled, she said, the newly elected president will appoint members, who must be approved by a two-thirds vote of those already serving on the board.

ASUM President Paul Tuss said he is confident there will be enough applicants by Friday.

"I would hate to see the deadline extended again," he said. "If there is not enough interest, the president should appoint members."

Tuss said there is "nothing belittling about being appointed," and he noted that some of the board's most productive people were appointed rather than elected.

Grier said she thinks fewer people applied for the seats because of CB's debate over whether elections should be held during Spring rather than Winter Quarter.

She added that UM's budget cuts are pressing students to speed up their curricular activities and devote less time to extracurricular activities.

Students interested in applying for CB positions can get information on ASUM rules and procedures at the organization's office in the University Center.

$1 buys a chance to win 3 credits

By Kate McCartney
Kaimin Contributing Reporter

A dollar doesn't buy what it used to, but for one student, it's going to buy three credits of education Spring Quarter.

That's the grand prize being offered in a raffle sponsored by the University of Montana Range Club.

However, there's a catch. "You have to attend the class; we just pay for it," Becky Greenwood, vice president of the Range Club, said Friday.

The winning student will have three credits paid for next quarter, which makes the grand prize worth $175.

According to George Cleek, Range Club president, this is the third consecutive year the raffle has been held.

The $1 raffle tickets will be sold in the UC mall every Friday through Feb. 27, and the drawing will be held the afternoon of the 27th.

Profits from the raffle will be used to buy plaques for a native plant garden planted last year. The plaques will be placed in the garden and will give scientific names for each plant.

The Range Club is affiliated with the School of Forestry.

Lady Griz clinch Mountain West Grizzlies face Boise State and Idaho on road

By Robert Dorroh
Kaimin Sports Editor

At this stage of the season, the 21-2 Lady Griz are probably looking forward to the NCAA playoffs after beating Idaho State 77-57 and Weber State 87-52 last week to clinch the Mountain West Conference title with a 9-0 record.

In the meantime, the Griz hope that the outstanding play of senior guard Scott Zanon continues as they play road games this week against Boise State Thursday at 7:30 p.m. (MST) and Idaho Saturday at 8:30 p.m. (MST).

The Lady Griz play Boise State and Idaho on Thursday and Sunday nights, respectively, at Dahlberg Arena. Game time for the Boise State game is 7:30 p.m. while the Idaho game is at 2 p.m.

With the two lopsided wins last week, UM head coach Robin Selvig recorded his seventh consecutive 20-win season and will be going for his 200th career win against Boise State Thursday.

The play Montana has been getting from its bench is especially encouraging.

UM's 6-foot sophomore forward/center Jean McNulty is averaging 8.6 points and 5.7 rebounds per game while 5-9½ junior guard Kris Moede is at 7.2 ppg and 2.2 rpg.

And 6-0 junior guard Karyn Ridgeway had her best week of the season last week, hitting 90 percent from the field, 86 percent from the free throw line, and scoring 30 points, including a season-high 19 against Weber in just 21 minutes of playing time.

"In terms of confidence, Karyn has really found herself," Selvig said.

Starting 6-0 junior forward Dawn Silliker, who has battled a shooting slump in conference play, responded by making 10 of 16 from the field and converting 8 of 8 free throws against ISU and WSC.

Against Idaho State, junior 6-2 forward Marti Leibenguth set a school record with eight steals while also pulling down 12 rebounds.

The Lady Griz beat Boise State 66-38 the last time the teams met. BSU is 9-14 overall and 2-7 in the Mountain West this season.

But in UM's last game against Idaho, the Lady Griz barely escaped with a 65-60 win after trailing by nine points at the half.

The Lady Vandals are led by 5-7 senior guard Krista Dunn who averages 15.1 ppg. Zanon had the best week of his career last week. "Z" scored 19 second half points on his way to a game-high 22 points and 11 assists in UM's 73-66 win over Idaho State Thursday.

And on Saturday, Zanon scored a career-high 31 points in UM's 82-78 victory over Weber State.

The Griz are now 18-7 overall and are in second place in the Big Sky Conference with an 8-3 record, a half game ahead of Boise State who is 18-5 and 7-3.

Meanwhile, Idaho has been struggling lately, losing six of their last seven games. But the Vandals still have a respectable 18-10 overall record.

Boise State is led by 6-6 junior forward Arnell Jones who averages 16.2 points and 8.7 rebounds per game.

CUSTOMER APPRECIATION DAY!!!!

business during the course of doing business, we forget to stop and thank the most important element that makes our business work. YOU, our customers. For without you we would not be.

There is another important element that we would like to thank. The faculty and staff here at the U of M. For without your earnest pursuit of excellence in higher education the University would not have the reputation it holds today. We salute you and say "thanks" for all your support and patronage. It is our goal to continue to earn your respect and confidence.

Thanks again to the staff and management.

Bills

"I'm really unsure of any problems that are motivating that bill. I have some concern that if there isn't a problem, then why a constitutional amendment."

James Koch, UM president, said Tuesday that he understands that the constitution is unclear as to which branch of government has authority over the university system.

Giving total authority to the Legislature is not right, he said.

"Whatever the number of dollars the Legislature gives us, we ought to have the right to manage it intelligently," he said. "I think at best higher education decisions should be made by academic people."

Last week Bradley voted to have the bill drafted so she could see written details of the bill, but said after the committee meeting she does not support the idea to gain control of university expenditures.

"I absolutely do not; that's not our job," she said.

The four bills so far to gain control over the university system are a response to the Legislature's no-win money situation, Bradley said, but the strategy is counterproductive. If passed, the bills would take away the regents' financial flexibility, she said, just when the regents need that flexibility most.

"That's absolutely backwards," she said.

Lobbyists and officials from the university system said one reason for the attack on the system is that legislators feel the budget proposals are a political ploy to gain sympathy for the universities.

"They still don't trust us," an Eastern Montana College student lobbyist said.

Peck's request will be drafted as a committee bill this week. The bill would have to pass by a two-thirds majority in the House, Senate and a general election before it would become part of the constitution.

Other bills aimed at placing more legislative control over the university system are:

• HB 693. This bill introduced by John Mercer, R-Polson, which the State Administration Committee passed Friday, would require state agencies, "including the Montana university system," to provide the Legislature, for fiscal purposes, a priority list which ranks programs in order of importance.

• HB 659. Introduced by Rep. Paul Rapp-Svrcek, D-Thompson Falls, this bill would close Montana's four state colleges at Dillon, Butte, Havre and Billings if the regents do not convert those schools into two-year institutions by July, 1988.

• HB 671. Rapp-Svrcek said he introduced this constitutional amendment as a backup measure for HB 659. The amendment would give the Legislature the authority to close campuses.
